If you're not really into the methem, icon packs, custom launchers and all those sometimes a simple wallpaper switch will help breathe fresh air into your smartphone. It's pretty much universally simple to get the deed done, and a fresh new background can really spruce things up for the home screen. RECOMMENDED VIDEO Quad-core processors and large screens receive most of the attention at Mobile World Congress, but one feature that is becoming more common on new smartphones is HD Voice. Several smartphones become compatible with HD Voice, which improves call voice quality as operators' interest in technology grows. But even more mobile operators need to board to increase their usability, according to Orange. The improved quality it offers is possible thanks to AMR-WB (Adaptive Multi-Rate - Wideband), a speech compression algorithm that doubles the range of transmitted vocal frequencies. The phones also have better acoustics and noise cancellation, according to Alex Nourouzi, product marketing director at Orange, which benefits all users. We are now seeing a lot of launch operators; the last to go live were Swisscom in Switzerland and KPN in the Netherlands, which is still a process. So they put pressure on phone manufacturers to put HD voice on their phones, said Jan Derksen, head of technical marketing at Ericsson Networks. Bell Mobility in Canada, also launched HD Voice earlier this year, according to the industry organization GSA (Global Mobile Suppliers Association). This pressure helps to make a default feature on new smartphones, such as Nokia Lumia 610, Huawei Ascend D Quad, STE Era, HTC One X and Sony Xperia P. Even though the sound quality has improved, there are still things vendors can do to make it even better. For example, the plastic around the microphone can be changed to get better acoustics, Derksen said. A product that both Derksen Nouusi would like to see get HD Voice is the iPhone, but putting pressure on Apple is difficult. Today, HD Voice is live in 39 networks and 31 countries, as of February 20, according to GSA. Orange was the driver and owns about a third of the networks that are live. Other operators include Telstra in Australia, 3 in the UK and T-Mobile in a even more need to get on board, according to Nourouzi. We must continue to build on the current momentum. I told Vodafone and Telefonica that this is not acceptable: where are you?, he said. For operators, it has the promise to make longer and longer calls, while users get better quality at the same cost. Users really start to appreciate the higher quality when they make calls in normal environments, would be here [at Mobile World Congress] where there is a lot of background noise, Derksen said. Nouusi agrees: You know right away when you're on an HD call because you get the feeling that the person you're talking to is in the same room, Nourouzi said. Currently, no customer walks into a store and says they want an HD Voice phone, but when they hear the demo they don't want to come back, he said. It's my second favorite Christmas holiday just, but it holds a special place in my heart because I get back-to-back goodness from my birthday and then, 24 hours later, all the goodness Halloween brings. Those at DualBoot Games (the creators of other live wallpapers, would be Celtic Garden HD) have whipped another for us, this time all haunted and creepy, just in time for Halloween. It's called Haunted House HD, and in terms of live wallpapers go, despite the fact that it's time sensitive, it's probably one of the most detailed I've encountered. From the moment you open the live wallpaper selector and choose Haunted House HD, the Halloween vibe will wash over you. A room walks past a creepy house, shrouded in fog, while the lights flicker. Jack-o'-lanterns guard the door and scary messages appear over the door in blood. Everything is quite smooth, despite the fact that so much is happening. The door opens and closes by itself as the camera sweeps back, the lights light up, revealing a silhouette in the window, and the flag on the mailbox moves up and down on its own initiative. If you want to enter the house, you'll need to skip the fully loaded settings menu and change the camera view. The interior of the house is as (if not more) occupied than the outside. The lights continue to flicker, the fire is a pale blue, ghostly, and the paintings have skulls superimposed on the face of the subject. The ethereal steps pulsate and disappear on the floor, and the odd breeze throws the chandelier around. It's a lot to take in, but it's still really fun. Back to the settings menu, when I said uploaded, I meant it. You can choose the camera view, set For the mailbox and door, choose the type of face you want for pumpkins, and activate individually or disable each wallpaper variable it has to offer. If you feel like getting into the holiday spirit, Haunted House HD is $1.99 in Android. We have several pictures and download links after the break.
